

THE LUXURY SPOT

June 6, 2014

You know how there are those people that head out to the Hamptons for the weekend? Those people are the most basic people I've ever met. The Hamptons hasn't been cool since Sean Combs threw the white party. Now it's filled with people that have no business renting a summer share. It's also become too sceney and it's no longer the relaxation destination. Luckily for us, as those bitches head out east we've got the rooftops of New York City all to ourselves.

If you want the perfect summer hangout, you need to head to Jimmy At The James. The rooftop pool bar is perched upon the top of downtown's James Hotel. Personally, I love heading here for a few drinks during the weekend afternoon with friends. What's so great about it? It's never really packed. You can grab a drink and put your feet in the pool and just enjoy yourself.
